After all, the demons believe many truths about God, but they are compelled to believe due to the obviousness of those truths. Burk Parsons. The doctrine of the Incarnation further teaches that Christ is the complete and perfect union of two natures, human and divine.

That is, each person of the Trinity is equally to God. Thus we can imagine that a Then we are in constant development, constant progress, continuous sanctification, and continuous transformation into the image of Christ. In doing so, it permits us to freely endorse those things that we in our sinful state would never be able—or want—to understand and embrace. Henry Mahan.
