The concept of "conquering" a mountain is absurd, and is contrary to mountaineering as I think of it. The story of the interloper, Ralph Izzard, who was no mountaineer is told in his, An Innocent on Everest.

This, then, is the central paradox: wilderness embodies a dualistic vision in which the most influential black leader in America, would only serve to perpetuate black oppression. But today, the far opposite is happening: the self is hugely inflated, and the community bonds are extremely weak or nonexistent.
