To be able to save money with automation, the product must be stable. At the same time, the full manual regression testing took two to three days to complete. It is a good practice to share the Test Plan document with the client so that the development team and client both are on same plane. The project now benefits from this reduced test time each time the tests are rerun. If possible, I'd like the testers to write down how they spend their time for a week or two, to break the work down into major categories. However, none of the users was ever able to install the app on their smartphone! Use this tutorial Best housekeeping generally ensures that the system is healthy, wealthy and growing. If the skill set is not available, it would be recommendable to outsource the project. Not so long ago, we were approached by a client who had 12 testers in their in-house team and wanted to extend it offshore to increase the bandwidth and do more work for the same budget.
