What constitutes an appropriate duration for general practice training is a question that has been debated for many years. Do you have any competing interests to declare? General practitioners: numbers Fry, John Pages N Engl J Med. Our intent was to define the role family physicians should be prepared to fill while recognizing that practice settings and community need would naturally modify the roles of individual family physicians to some extent. We have never had as many family physician deans and academic health system vice presidents as we have right now.
