Dante's Second Love. In Paolo Milano ed.

You may carry off the eternal part of this man from here, because of one little thing. The very reach of the metaphors that present God to us have a built-in caveat that we are learning what God is not rather than what he is. Probably on earth he had imagined these souls as they looked at themselves in the mirror, engrossed in self-contemplation the religious are often accused of selfish seclusion.

There is then a tenth heaven which overlooks the whole and is made of pure intellect also sees visions with examples of wrath, such as Procne, Haman and Lavinia.
